NEW PAWN IN THE GAME

• Corrupt Clinton to be replaced by Skull & Bonesman Kerry

By Michael Collins Piper

The replacement of Hillary Clinton with Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) as secretary of state exemplifies the domination of U.S. foreign policymaking by an elite few — no matter which party happens to be in power.

Critics call Mrs. Clinton a "communist," implying she might be on the Russian or Chinese payrolls, and accuse Kerry of being a "traitor," stemming from his theatrical antics as a Vietnam War critic, after returning from that conflict as a highly decorated combat veteran.

However, the truth is that what is already in the public record demonstrates beyond question that Mrs. Clinton (and her husband, the ex-president), along with Kerry, are tried-and-true members of a network of would-be world-shapers who are neither "conservative" nor "liberal" nor "communist" or "anti-communist."

Clinton and Kerry are hardly grimy left-wing street agitators. Instead, they move in the highest circles of the money lords and their paid henchmen, operating through power groups such as Bilderberg, the Trilateral Commission and the Council on Foreign Relations, all interlocked with the London-based Royal Institute of International Affairs, foreign policy arm of the predatory plutocratic Rothschild dynasty.

Power-oriented, focused on the manipulation and management of peoples and nations for the benefit of global corporate conglomerates and exploitive international financial institutions, these elements are central forces behind the drive for what both critics and advocates refer to as the New World Order.

Recruited by the international cabal during their college days, the Clintons and Kerry — a member of Yale's secret society, Skull & Bones — are simply pawns, interchangeable players in the public eye, media personalities who take the front-line heat for the real powers behind the scenes.
